FAQ

What specific qualifications or prerequisites are needed for participants before enrolling in the course?

Participants do not need formal qualifications, but a background in cultural programming, library development, public administration, or nonprofit leadership will be highly beneficial. Experience in managing or planning community-based or educational programs will enhance the learning experience.

How long is each day's session, and is there a total number of hours required for the entire course?

Each day's session is generally structured to last around 4-5 hours, with breaks and interactive activities included. The total course duration spans ten days, approximately 40-45 hours of instruction.

What is the difference between a smart library and a traditional one?

A smart library integrates digital infrastructure, interactive technologies, and community-driven design to provide personalized and multifunctional learning services. Unlike traditional libraries that focus primarily on physical collections, smart libraries offer real-time digital access, participatory programs, and flexible spaces to adapt to user needs.

How This Course is Different from Other Cultural Innovation Courses

The Cultural Leadership and Innovation Program stands apart from other training courses by focusing on the intersection of leadership, design thinking, and digital transformation in libraries and cultural centers. Instead of teaching abstract theory, this course provides actionable strategies drawn from real case studies—such as London’s smart libraries—and offers templates, evaluation tools, and public communication techniques grounded in practice. Participants will not only explore future-oriented cultural trends but will also apply what they learn through a capstone project. The course is designed for immediate application in public and nonprofit institutions. Unlike other offerings, this program equips cultural leaders to co-create inclusive spaces and to strategically lead institutional change with measurable community impact.
