FAQ

What specific qualifications or prerequisites are needed for participants before enrolling in the course?

No formal prerequisites are required to join this course. However, individuals working in museums, cultural institutions, education, or exhibition-related roles will benefit the most, as the course builds practical skills that can be directly applied in real exhibition projects.

How long is each day's session, and what is the total course duration?

Each training day is typically structured to last between 4 to 5 hours, combining interactive learning with practical exercises. The full program is delivered over ten days, resulting in approximately 40 to 50 hours of training, allowing participants to gain both depth and hands-on experience.

How This Course is Different from Other Museum Exhibition Design Courses

This Museum Exhibition Planning & Design course goes beyond traditional training by combining creative design, audience strategy, and practical implementation into one integrated program. While many courses focus mainly on exhibition theory or visual design, this program emphasizes how to plan, design, execute, and evaluate complete exhibitions from concept to final delivery.

Participants do not only learn design principles but also develop real exhibition outputs, including audience targeting strategies, exhibition scripts, graphics, and interactive experiences. The course also addresses modern requirements such as multilingual exhibitions, accessibility, inclusivity, and the integration of technology like interactive displays and digital tools.

Through hands-on workshops, real case studies, and a final project, participants gain the ability to create exhibitions that are not only visually engaging but also educational, accessible, and strategically aligned with institutional goals.
