Course Overview:

The Advanced Executive Secretariat and Leadership Office Management in Family Businesses course is a specialized corporate training programme designed for executive office managers, senior executive secretaries, and professionals who work closely with Chairpersons, Vice Chairpersons, board members, and senior executives.

The course develops the capabilities required to manage a high-level executive office beyond traditional administrative responsibilities. It focuses on executive office management, managing the Office of the Vice Chairperson, prioritizing sensitive assignments, coordinating with senior stakeholders, supporting board-related activities, managing executive correspondence, handling confidential documents, and applying executive protocol.

A key feature of the programme is its focus on the distinctive environment of family businesses, where family, ownership, the board of directors, and executive management may intersect. Participants will develop a practical understanding of Family Business Governance and learn how to maintain professional boundaries, manage communication channels, protect confidentiality, and support senior leadership without overstepping formal roles and authorities.

The course also reflects recognized governance practices relating to coordination among board members and senior management, timely access to relevant information, proper record keeping, meeting organization, and structured communication. It further addresses the importance of separating family interests from corporate interests and clarifying the respective roles of ownership, governance bodies, and executive management in family businesses.

Training Methodology:

The course uses an applied and highly interactive methodology that connects the principles of Advanced Executive Secretariat and Executive Office Management with the practical realities of supporting senior leaders in family businesses.

Each module begins with a focused explanation of relevant concepts, responsibilities, and governance considerations before moving into realistic executive office scenarios. Participants will examine practical cases involving the Office of the Vice Chairperson, competing priorities, sensitive information flows, executive correspondence, board meetings, confidential documents, and high-level stakeholder coordination.

Group discussions will be used to explore the challenges that can arise when family, ownership, the board of directors, and executive management intersect. Participants will analyze how to maintain appropriate professional boundaries, use formal communication channels, and support leadership while respecting established governance structures.

The programme also includes practical exercises in prioritization, stakeholder mapping, meeting preparation, executive communication, confidential information handling, and Executive Protocol. Board-related activities will reflect recognized practices in meeting organization, timely provision of information, documentation, record keeping, and decision follow-up.

FAQ:

What qualifications or prerequisites are required before enrolling in the course?

There are no mandatory academic prerequisites. However, prior experience in Executive Secretariat, Executive Office Management, senior leadership support, or Board Administration will help participants gain greater practical value from the programme. The course is also suitable for professionals preparing to move into an Executive Office Manager role or support the office of a Chairperson or Vice Chairperson.

How long is each daily session, and what is the total duration of the course?

Each daily session lasts approximately 4–5 hours, including breaks and interactive activities. The full course runs for five days, with a total duration of approximately 20–25 training hours.

How does the role of an Executive Office Manager change when family, ownership, the board, and executive management overlap?

The challenge arises because one individual may simultaneously be a family member, shareholder, board member, or executive. The Executive Office Manager must therefore understand the capacity in which each person is acting in a given situation and use the appropriate communication channel, level of confidentiality, and authority structure. Family Business Governance guidance emphasizes the importance of maintaining clear distinctions between family forums, ownership structures, boards of directors, and executive management while ensuring effective coordination among them.

How This Course Differs from Other Courses:

This course differs from conventional secretarial training because it goes beyond calendar management, correspondence, and routine administration. It focuses on the advanced responsibilities of an Executive Office Manager working directly with a Vice Chairperson, Chairperson, board member, or other senior leader within a family business environment.

The programme combines Advanced Executive Secretariat, Executive Office Management, Board Office Management, and an applied understanding of Family Business Governance. It does not aim to turn participants into corporate governance specialists or Board Secretaries. Instead, it provides the level of governance awareness required to perform a senior executive support role effectively and professionally.

Professional board-support guidance highlights the need for organized information flows, meeting coordination, record keeping, communication, and support to board members. At the same time, family business governance guidance emphasizes clear role boundaries, separation between family and corporate interests, and structured relationships among family members, shareholders, the board, and management.

The course therefore focuses on realistic situations such as competing priorities, sensitive requests, confidential documents, Supporting Board Members, communication with family stakeholders, Executive Protocol, and high-level coordination. This makes it a practical and integrated programme for Executive Office Managers operating in complex leadership and family business environments.
