Workplace Feedback Skills and Constructive Conversations Course

Ref: 1673_225821 Date: 15 – 19 February 2027 Location: Tokyo Fees: 10000 Euro

Overview

Workplace Feedback Skills and Constructive Conversations Course is a one-week course for managers, team leaders and professionals who leave with a Workplace Feedback Conversation and Action Plan. The course develops evidence-based feedback conversations through observable behavior, active listening, emotional regulation, action planning and follow-up. Participants practice giving, receiving and applying constructive feedback across operational, service and project settings. Agile Leaders Training Center develops workplace feedback capability.

Who Should Attend

- Teams responsible for guiding employee performance and development
- Teams responsible for coordinating projects and cross-functional work
- Teams responsible for customer service and quality improvement
- Teams responsible for people development and employee experience
- Professionals responsible for receiving and applying workplace feedback

The course assumes participants handle workplace conversations and leaves out formal disciplinary procedure, clinical counseling and legal case management.

FAQs

Who should take workplace feedback skills training, and what does it assume?

Workplace feedback skills training suits managers, team leaders and professionals who already participate in work conversations and need a repeatable method for giving, receiving and applying feedback.

How does workplace feedback skills training differ from general communication training?

Workplace feedback skills training concentrates on observable behavior, impact, listening, emotional responses, agreed improvement actions and follow-up, while general communication training addresses a wider range of interpersonal situations.

What makes a constructive feedback conversation useful?

A constructive feedback conversation is useful when it is timely, specific, evidence-based, respectful and two-way, and when it ends with clear understanding, support and agreed next steps.

How can professionals receive workplace feedback without becoming defensive?

Professionals can receive workplace feedback by pausing, listening without interruption, asking clarifying questions, separating evidence from interpretation and deciding which actions will improve their work.

Conclusion

Participants take back a Workplace Feedback Conversation and Action Plan containing evidence, an SBI message, listening questions, response choices, improvement actions and follow-up. The plan makes expectations and responsibilities visible before, during and after a feedback conversation. It helps teams replace vague judgments with observable information, two-way dialogue and monitored improvement.
