FAQs

Who suits ship sale and purchase training, and what does it assume?

Ship sale and purchase training suits owners, brokers, lawyers, financiers, technical managers and transaction advisers. It assumes practical exposure to maritime assets, contracts, inspections or finance.

How does ship sale and purchase differ from ship chartering?

Ship sale and purchase transfers ownership through valuation, due diligence, contract, closing and delivery. Chartering grants commercial use of a vessel under voyage, time or bareboat terms without necessarily transferring title.

What belongs in ship sale and purchase due diligence?

Ship sale and purchase due diligence covers ownership, mortgages, encumbrances, class status, certificates, technical condition, trading history, contract exposure, documentation gaps and exceptions requiring protection or resolution.

What controls a ship sale and purchase closing?

A ship sale and purchase closing is controlled through satisfied conditions, agreed documents, verified funds, authorized signatories, delivery evidence, title-transfer steps, registry actions and a record of outstanding obligations.

How does SALEFORM support a ship sale and purchase transaction?

SALEFORM provides a structured memorandum of agreement for price, deposit, inspection, delivery, documents, risk allocation, default and related transaction terms that parties complete and negotiate for the deal.

Conclusion

Participants take back a Ship Sale and Purchase Transaction File linking screening, valuation, due diligence, contract terms, closing evidence and title-transfer actions. The file makes decisions, exceptions and responsibilities traceable. It supports coordinated execution among commercial, legal, technical, finance and documentation teams.
