Overview

Modern Practices in Human Resources Management is an intensive professional program designed to equip HR practitioners in Saudi Arabia with contemporary strategies, operational frameworks, and regulatory insights. This course bridges traditional personnel management with strategic human capital development, aligning workforce capabilities with organizational objectives and national economic transformations. Participants will explore advanced approaches to talent acquisition, performance enablement, employee retention, and data-driven HR analytics tailored to the regional business landscape.

Target Audience

This program is designed for human resources managers, HR generalists, talent acquisition specialists, organizational development professionals, and business leaders operating within the Saudi Arabian market who want to modernize their departmental practices and enhance employee engagement.

Relevant Departments and Industries

The concepts covered apply across human resources, corporate administration, talent management, and operational leadership departments. The curriculum serves professionals across diverse sectors in Saudi Arabia, including energy, finance, retail, healthcare, hospitality, government entities, and technology enterprises.

Measurable Learning Objectives

- Design competitive talent acquisition strategies that comply with local labor regulations and attract skilled national and international professionals.
- Implement structured performance management systems that link individual KPIs directly to broader organizational goals.
- Apply data analytics to evaluate workforce productivity, turnover rates, and human capital return on investment.
- Construct comprehensive employee retention and engagement frameworks aligned with regional workplace preferences.
- Navigate complex organizational restructuring and change management initiatives while maintaining operational continuity.
